LOOKING BACK: THE MEMOIR'S OF AN ORDINARY MAN, TERRY LLOYD TENNANT Terry Tennant

His life beginning in an upstairs flat in Detroit, Michigan, this is the story of Terry Tennant, born into poverty during the great depression in the 1930's. At age 18 he enlisted in the United States Army. After 2 years of peacetime training, the Korean War broke out and he was sent with the 7th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Division to Japan, where they trained South Korean, Puerto Rican and American GI's, turning them into a viable fighting unit. In November 1950 they crossed the Sea of Japan landing in Wonsan, North Korea, and became a part of X corps. Then they entered the Chinese Communist Forces in overwhelming numbers, resulting in savage fighting in the worst possible terrain, treacherous icy mountain roads, and severe cold weather, finally being pushed back to the water's edge at Hungnam, where they were rescued by the waiting US Navy. Included in the last part of this book are all of Terry's letters sent from Korea, to his family back home. They show firsthand the hope, fear, and problems faced daily, by a young infantry soldier, doing his best to cope with the situations faced, and doing the job required so he and his comrades could survive. Definitely worth the read!
