This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1879 edition. Excerpt: ...John the Baptist; next the archangels and the figures of the apostles, the prophets, and the patriarchs, who, ever withdrawing from Christ, come to rejoin him on the other side of the cupola. Some of these figures promise to be very remarkable, judging from the design, such as those of Saint John the Baptist, of Adam, and of many other personages of Holy Writ. "The upper part of the circumference of the cupola will be surmounted by a gallery, and an immense immovable chandelier will be suspended to light the cupola. This chandelier is finished, but is not yet hung. The cupola is twelve sages in diameter; it is so high that the whole tower of Ivan Veliky, with the cross on its summit, could stand within it. The interior height of the temple is thirty-three sages and one and three-fourths archine above the level of the ground, and thirty-two sages and three-fourths of an archine above the pavement. Its exterior height, comprising the cross on the summit, is forty-nine sages. 1 1 Labradorite is a beautiful variety of feldspar of pearly lustre, often exhibiting a play of blue, green, yellow, and red colors. It is found in abundance in Labrador, hence its name. Porphyry (jropvpa, purple) is a rock of a compact base of reddish feldspar, in which are disseminated rose-colored crystals of feldspar. Some varieties have a base of green, red, purple, or black. It is very hard, and susceptible of a beautiful polish. The Russians have been very successful in working it "The paintings on the ceiling of the cupola are executed by Professor Markoff, and will be finished, it is said, by January next. They represent God the Father with open arms, and the Holy Spirit issuing from His lips in the figure of a dove; the infant Jesus, bearing on His...
